The Department of Linguistics
is pleased to present

Ur Shlonsky

University of Geneve

speaking on

Subjects of copular constructions

Friday, October 12, 2018
1:20 PM
Location: HUM 1 - Room 210

Abstract:
Hebrew copular sentences look like root small clauses: "Daniela balshanit" (Daniela is a linguist'). I argue that they are not or rather, that they contain a (perhaps surprisingly) rich functional structure . The subject, Daniela, although initial in the string, can occupy distinct subject positions. I try to identify and chracterize these positions and propose a cartography of subject positions in copular sentences.